

ABSTRACT

Methods and system for facilitating authentication of users of a mouse device. Different individuals have different ways of manipulating a mouse to enter mouse-clicks requested via an on-screen image or other software programs. An individual's characteristic way of manipulating the mouse is determined and stored and later retrieved to facilitate verification of a user's identification.